THE POWER TO be myself

At Bank of America, we value all of our differences. We're stronger when we connect our diverse backgrounds and perspectives to better meet the needs of our teammates, clients and communities. We're proud of our roots in the LGBTQ+ community and have worked to strengthen them by enhancing benefits to support our LGBTQ+ teammates both professionally and personally.

What would you like the power to do?®

BANK OF AMERICA

At Bank of America, we often ask ourselves, “What would you like the power to do?” We, along with the incredible community of change agents brought together by Out & Equal, have enormous power to create the workplaces and societies we want and deserve—not just for today, but for tomorrow’s leaders.

From being the first financial institution to offer comprehensive domestic partner benefits, to publicly supporting the Equality Act, to deep philanthropic investments, our roots supporting the LGBTQ+ community began in the 1980’s. Today, our LGBTQ+ Pride Ally Program has grown to more than 40,000 allies and out-at-work teammates. We strive to be a great place to work for our employees, support our clients and be proactive in our neighborhoods where we live and work.

Our work does not stop there. We recognize the urgent need to address the relationship between racial inequality and lack of economic opportunity in the United States. In 2020, the bank committed $1.25B over 5 years to this important work. We look to Out & Equal as a quality community partner that can help lift barriers to economic mobility for the LGBTQ+ community, and especially for LGBTQ+ people of color.

We are proud to have funded and co-developed the Diverse Leadership Initiative with Out & Equal, which supports our shared mission to increase the pipeline of out LGBTQ+ talent in Fortune 500 companies by providing, toolkits, trainings, and mentorship opportunities for employers, under-represented mid-career LGBTQ+ talent, and LGBTQ+ Gen Z employees.

While the number of out LGBTQ+ high-potential talent and senior leaders has increased over the years, these cohorts often lack the true racial/ethnic and gender diversity of the broader LGBTQ+ population.

The solution is not simply more aggressive recruitment: workplaces must provide professional development opportunities to retain and promote their existing LGBTQ+ workforce. These professional development programs need intersectional frameworks in order to be successful—LGBTQ+ talent is too often relegated to identity silos in which they must prioritize, for example, their gender or race over their LGBTQ+ identity or vice versa. We are steadfast in creating an environment where this is never a choice our teammates need to make.

Strategic efforts to increase the pipeline of diverse leadership also depend on engaging Gen Z jobseekers. As the most racially, sexually, and gender-diverse generation yet, Gen Z workers face a unique set of challenges. As they enter the workforce, it is incumbent on us to authentically connect and show them our workplaces are welcoming places where uniqueness is valued and all employees can contribute to their fullest potential and thrive.

Whether we are providing personalized support during major life events, embedding inclusive messaging throughout all levels of the organization, enhancing benefits and resources to support diverse needs of families, or supporting legislation to protect human rights - our focus on creating a culture of inclusion where people know and feel all aspects of their identity are valued is unwavering.

We are stronger when we connect our diverse backgrounds and perspectives to better meet the needs of our teammates, clients, and communities. Together, we are unstoppable.

The Pride ERG at Dell Technologies has been on the forefront of LGBTQIA+ equality for the past two decades. Our Pride ERG just celebrated 20 years and has been awarded 100% on the Human Rights Campaign Corporate Equality Index for the last 18 years. This past year, we have focused our attention on a strong connection between our Pride ERG, Government Relations and Corporate Affairs teams to be a model leader to other companies in showing support to the LGBTQIA+ community with responsible and effective participation in the legislative process. From comprehensive training on lobbying, to a robust social media strategy, we empower employees/executives to advocate and remind legislators that companies thrive when employees can be their true, authentic selves at work.

To support Dell's advocacy and our team members' personal advocacy on LGBTQIA+ related bills, the community and the families of trans youth, Dell Technologies alongside our Transgender Task Force ramped up support to our advocacy partners such as GenderCool, held lobby days at State Houses, and developed important training and information we shared with participants at the O&E Executive Forum.

The Pride ERG has been named the center of joy in our company's hybrid work setting. This dedicated global Pride Leadership team volunteers their time to create global events like Pride's Got Talent, lip sync battles, Global Pride Month and dance parties that bring contests, speakers and fun from around the world. This work shows how innovative our ERG has been in putting a smile on team members' faces across the world even in a virtual world.

We have grown our membership over 15% to over 7,000 members and we are not stopping there, adding locations in South America, Canada and looking to add Poland and Philippines in the next year. We couldn't have done this without our advocacy partners, including Out & Equal, with whom we have been partnering since 2004. Dell Technologies is thrilled to not only be a Titanium Partner, but the official partner helping with the organization's digital transformation – showcasing the true impact technology can have in driving human progress. We are incredibly optimistic about the future and are proud that at Dell Technologies every employee in every country around the world is welcome to Be Yourself!

Inclusion is a key to our success

Why is it important for Experian to be active in LGBTQ+ inclusion efforts?

An inclusive workplace culture can only thrive when our colleagues feel they can bring their whole selves to work and don't have to hide who they are.

We learned through our first Out & Equal conference four years ago that, for some employees, the time they spend at work may be the safest parts of their day. Think about that. What an honor, and a responsibility, we have to our teammates.

We provide a safe, inclusive, and respectful work environment for all of our employees, and we seek to extend that to the communities we serve. We know the LGBTQ+ community still faces many challenges and discrimination.

Whether it's through credit education, partnering with organizations and advocates for the community, or sharing with the Out & Equal membership how we're leading the way, we can provide solutions. Our goal is to provide resources and support to help them achieve personal and professional success.

How does Experian empower emerging LGBTQ+ professionals?

Internally, we've created an employee resource group of teammates from senior leaders through our more junior associates called the Experian Pride Network that has been key to providing support, learnings, and development for our LGBTQ+ community and its allies. Combined with our broad-based talent management and professional development programs, we nurture a system that empowers our employees.

Why is it important for Experian to focus on intersectionality when talking about inclusion?

None of us is one-dimensional. I'm a mother, wife, daughter, friend, leader and more — and that's the reality of not only our LGBTQ+ community but for all our teammates. We have different genders, ethnicities, nationalities, faiths, abilities, and other parts of us that define the power of us as individuals. We celebrate that individuality and the commonalities we have with each other.

What does your partnership with Out & Equal mean to you?

Our Out & Equal partnership has been instrumental in helping us establish and grow how we support and show up for our LGBTQ+ teammates. Our colleagues and leaders have made connections with individuals and organizations that have influenced how our Pride Network has evolved and helped us form best practices and policies for our work.

Our Out & Equal partnership has reinforced our belief in what we can accomplish together and continues to inspire us to make our mission of financial inclusion a reality for all.

Get to know Brad Baumuel, JPMorgan Chase's Global Head of LGBT+ Affairs

How do you empower LGBTQ+ employees to be their authentic selves, especially at work?

We work tirelessly to be best-in-class in everything we do. We start with the most inclusive and extensive protections, policies and benefits.

But, we recognized quickly that workplace policies and practices were not enough.

We continue to evolve our talent management processes for the LGBTQ+ community, from targeted recruiting to leadership development, to mentorship and sponsorship, all geared towards increasing LGBTQ+ hiring, promotions and retention.

Visibility matters and we've greatly advanced LGBTQ+ representation. In 2021 after launching the Office of LGBT+ Affairs, LGBTQ+ self-identification increased by 50% year-over-year – something that we are not aware any company has done before. This points to the concrete impact of enterprise-wide investments like my office. We are partnering with Out & Equal to develop this into a case study for others to replicate.

We know that our global LGBTQ+ community has not historically seen ourselves in the highest echelons of business. We are laser-focused on elevating members of our Executive Forum – a group of nearly 500 LGBTQ+ senior leaders – providing them a platform and resources to be role models and mentors and make it even safer for others to come out. We are also proud to have won numerous Outies, not just for the recognition, but because it demonstrates to our employees that LGBTQ+ inclusion is a top priority.

What are some of the biggest challenges facing the LGBTQ+ community?

While the LGBTQ+ global community continues to face threats to equal rights and protections, the attacks have been especially acute for the transgender and gender non-conforming (TGNC) community. This requires a multipronged strategy. We bring together multiple teams internally, along with our Gender Expansive Council, and partner with non-profits to provide support and tangible resources to our employees and the communities in which we operate.

We are proud to have launched the Transgender & Nonbinary Leadership Initiative with Out & Equal. Together, we're investing in the professional development of TGNC employees at all career stages to significantly shift the landscape of workplace inclusion. Diversifying the talent pipeline is not enough. We are engaging together in a sustained agenda of building resources and educational offerings to support workplaces of true belonging and where careers thrive.

What motivates you to be unstoppable?

When I came out twenty-five years ago, the words "professional" and "gay" were never in the same sentence. I am motivated to pave a path in which every identity under the rich and diverse LGBTQ+ umbrella is valued for who they are and what they bring to their professions and the workplace.

However you move through life, move with Pride.

Uber

On the Uber platform, a staggering number of different people interact with one another across our 20 million trips a day. We need to build our products and run our business in a way that reflects the diverse communities we serve. That means it's essential for our workforce to internally reflect the diversity that exists on our platform. If we want to achieve this success, it is necessary for us to cultivate an environment where diversity thrives, where people feel they belong, and contributions lead to the greater purpose.

By making gradual and sustainable changes over time, Uber has rebuilt the foundation from the bottom up and completely reshaped our culture. Five years later, we are already seeing how diversity is making us stronger and enabling us to create more of an equitable and inclusive environment to move the world for the better.

Whether as an employee or a client, at Uber our purpose includes providing a safe environment for everyone to dress, speak and show-up as their authentic selves. This includes pulling your loved ones into the frame and being able to ride hand in hand in our cars. To move with Pride, Uber believes in shedding and evolving beyond gender and sexual oriented cultural stereotypes. To give everyone the ability to define their own identity as an earner or as a customer. Most importantly, to move with Pride at Uber means owning our journey and driving forward with purpose to always do better.
